The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim1 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102b as being anticipated by Kompanek.

Kompanek figure 3 teaches a piezoelectric generator comprising a piezoelectric layer where in a portion of said layer has a maximal displacement and a frame or said piezoelectric layer where in said portion substantially fifths in said frame when said maximum displacement occurs.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim2 and 3 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Radice. Figures 1 and 2 show an array of piezoelectric generators (10 and 12) generators are separated by an isolation layer 38 the generators (made of for examplePVDF) have a first stiffness and said isolation layer (made of a non-piezoelectric material) would lead inherently have its second stiffness different from the first stiffness. Layer stiffness would also vary depending on the thickness of the layer. Kompanek indicates layer thicknesses are probably different (see column 3 lines 47 -

54). Claim 2 lead calls for the second stiffness to be greater than the first stiffness, wherein claim 3 specifies the exact opposite relation ship. Thus, the two claims cover all possibilities except for the stiffness be equal. It has long been held that optimization of a known structure (our example through routine experimentation) is within the skill expected of the routineer. Thus, selection of appropriate materials, dimensions and stiffnesses would have been obvious one of ordinary skill in art.
